BEECH 18 PRODUCTION LIST

Compiled by Geoff Goodall

PART 4: BEECH SUPER 18: E18S, G18S & Super H18

(Built at Wichita, Kansas 1953-1969)

The final production model of the Beech 18 line, this H18 N34AP (c/n BA-746) was built in 1967 for Japan Air Lines with factory-fitted Volpar trigear. Seen at Lanai, Hawaii on an early morning All Hawaii Air freight run from Honolulu delivering freshly baked bread to Hawaiian islands in September 1979.

The final developments of the Beech 18 line, the E18S, G18S and ultimate Super H18 were built at Wichita, Kansas between 1953 and 1968. Aimed squarely at the business aircraft market, they were advertised as Beech Super 18s, featuring a raised roof and enlarged cockpit windows. Many were retro-fitted with the popular Volpar trigear undercarriage modification, and Beech offered the final model, the Super H18 with factory fitted Volpar trigear.

The Super 18s had increased wingspan and improved performance, extended range, and all models had larger windows and door. The initial E18S had a All Up Weight of 9300 pounds, 550 pounds more than the current production D18S. Payload was further increased with later models.

Model E18S-9700 had AUW increased to 9700 lbs, and was first model with 3 bladed propellers. A larger centre cabin window was introduced during the last third of the G18S production. The H18 was fitted with three-bladed Hartzell propellers as standard.

Beech used the BA- prefix for the construction numbers of all models of Super 18s, presented in documentation and aircraft plates with and without the hyphen:

This aircraft? or possibly Tradewind AF-831/N9981Z/HS-SKA?

- In early 1967, CIA was preparing a programme of surveillance of the Ho Chi Minh Trail: Air America planned to use its Volpar Turbo 18s, also bidding for the contract was Boun Oum Airways (BOA) owned by Laotian prince Boun Oum: since 1965 BOA had expanded when Continental Air Service (CASI) loaned it 2 PA18s, 2 C-47s, a second Dornier Do28 and a Beech Tradewind conversion: none of BOA's aircraft carried any airline logo and aircraft and their

Thai pilots were integrated with CASI by early 1967;

- As part of the overall shift of CIA paramilitary programmes to the US Dept of Defense, covert operations in Vietnam were turned over to a new Saigon-based Special Operations Group (SOG) controlled by the Pentagon from January 1964. Under SOG, infiltration missions into North Vietnam were to continue, using Chinese Air Force C-123Bs with ECM gear flown by Chinese and SVNAF crews, plus C-46s. From 1966 two unmarked China Airlines aircraft, a C-47 & Beech C-45 plus crews, were contracted by SOG for flights within South Vietnam. The C-45 was used primarily by the SOG commander and other senior personnel. The following year the C-45 was found to be unairworthy and was replaced by a modified PAC Tradewind effective 1.9.67;

- In June 1971 the Tradewind had been replaced by a C-46, which was used for SOG passenger flights. The C-46 hit a mountain 5.6.72 in Central Highlands, killing 11 Americans, 1 South Vietnamese and 6 Chinese. After this, the remaining CAL crew returned to Taiwan, bringing to an end this secret chapter of Republic of China participation in the Vietnam War;

- Parmerter p.375: "The prototype Tradewind N9981Z was operating in SE Asia in late 1966 for Continental Air Services Inc, then with Boun Oum Airways (owned by Laotian Prince Boun Oum) then then for Sahakol Air in Thailand as HS-SKA. Its fate is unknown".

N2405C noted Tucson AZ 24.5.73 at Hamilton Aircraft ramp;

Frank Bonansinga (ex Air America pilot), purchased E18S in 6.73, had Hamilton mods installed by Hamilton Aircraft in Tucson. Hamilton long cargo nose, spar strap, metal cabin liner, pilot hatch and cargo door: he says the long nose added 10 knots and made it more stable and easier to land with more aft CofG. Based it at Ilopango, San Salvador on cargo & pax work.

Flew several medivacs non-stop to New Orleans & Miami, and one to Tampa then Boston with sick US Embassy person. Brought back full loads of used clothing from New Orleans and Brownsville TX which was sold in op stores in San Salvador. "I was a poor businessman but I loved flying it for the few years I was in Central America." Aircraft was painted pale green. He repainted it white when he brought it back to USA and sold it in 1977. He believes subsequently sold to Mexico;
